George Slavich, Ph.D.
Past President and Co-Founder

George Slavich, Ph.D., is an assistant professor and Society in Science: Branco Weiss Fellow in the Department of Psychiatry and Biobehavioral Sciences at UCLA. He is also a Research Scientist in the Cousins Center for Psychoneuroimmunology, where he directs the Laboratory for Stress Assessment and Research (www.uclastresslab.org). Dr. Slavich completed undergraduate and graduate coursework in psychology and communication at Stanford University, and received his Ph.D. in clinical psychology from the University of Oregon. After graduate school, he was a clinical psychology intern at McLean Hospital and a clinical fellow in the Department of Psychiatry at Harvard Medical School. He subsequently completed three years of postdoctoral training in psychoneuroimmunology, first as an NIMH Postdoctoral Fellow in the Health Psychology Program at UCSF and then as an NIMH Postdoctoral Fellow at the Cousins Center for Psychoneuroimmunology at UCLA. In addition to his research, which examines how social stressors affect psychological and physical health, Dr. Slavich has been a long-time champion of student interests. He founded the Stanford Undergraduate Psychology Conference in 2001 and the Western Psychological Association Student Council in 2002, and co-founded the Society of Clinical Psychology's Section on Graduate Student and Early Career Psychologists in 2006.
